

Claiming free prescriptions?

If you claim free NHS prescriptions that you're not entitled to, you could be facing a penalty charge of up to £100 – as well as the original prescription charge(s).

If you're not sure whether you qualify, please pay for your prescriptions and ask for an NHS receipt – you may be able to claim a refund later. Even if you're not currently entitled, this guide tells you what help could be available.

If you're sure that the NHS covers the cost of your prescriptions, please show evidence of your entitlement to the pharmacy or practice staff before signing the patient declaration.

What entitles you to free prescriptions?

Age

Benefits

Certificates

It's your responsibility to check whether you're entitled before you declare that you don't have to pay and the staff at your pharmacy or practice should ask to see evidence of your exemption. Regular checks are carried out on prescriptions that are not paid for, which means you could be asked to provide evidence at a later date.

Age

The NHS will cover the cost of your prescriptions if you are:

- ✓ 60 or over
- ✓ under 16
- ✓ 16, 17 or 18 and in qualifying full-time education.

Students aged 19 and over are not automatically entitled to free prescriptions. However, many do qualify through the NHS Low Income Scheme. Please see page 7 for more details.

Evidence of your entitlement

You don't need to show evidence of your age if your date of birth is printed on your prescription. If it isn't, you can use any official document that shows your date of birth as evidence, such as your birth certificate or passport. A letter from your school or college shows you are in full-time education.

Benefits

Not all benefits entitle you to free prescriptions. You will have to pay for your prescriptions even if you're included in an award of:

- ✗ contribution-based Jobseeker's Allowance paid on its own
- ✗ contribution-based Employment and Support Allowance paid on its own
- ✗ Pension Credit (Savings Credit) paid on its own
- ✗ any other benefit paid on its own and not listed in the green box below (such as Disability Living Allowance, Personal Independence Payment, Incapacity Benefit etc.).

The NHS will cover the cost of your prescriptions if, at the time the prescription is dispensed, you're included in an award of:

- ✓ Income Support
- ✓ Income-based Jobseeker's Allowance paid on its own or with contribution-based Jobseeker's Allowance
- ✓ Income-related Employment and Support Allowance paid on its own or with contribution-based Employment and Support Allowance
- ✓ Pension Credit (Guarantee Credit) paid on its own or with Pension Credit (Savings Credit)
- ✓ Child Tax Credit, Working Tax Credit including a disability element or Child Tax Credit and Working Tax Credit paid together. Your family income (used to work out your tax credits) must also be £15,276 or less. You will normally be sent an NHS Tax Credit Exemption Certificate – please see page 5.

The NHS will also cover the cost of your prescriptions if you're included in an award of Universal Credit, and your net earnings for the most recent assessment period were £435 or less (or £935 or less if your Universal Credit includes an element for either a child or limited capability for work/work related activity).

Evidence of your entitlement

You can use an entitlement letter, award notice or most recent Universal Credit statement from either the Department of Work and Pensions, HM Revenue and Customs, Jobcentre Plus or Pension Service as evidence.

Certificates

The NHS will cover the cost of your prescriptions if you have a valid exemption certificate.

Maternity exemption certificate

If you're pregnant or have had a baby within the last 12 months, the NHS will cover the cost of your prescriptions if you have a maternity exemption certificate. Speak to your doctor, midwife or health visitor to find out how to apply.

Your certificate will be valid from one month before the date that we receive your application and it will show the date that it expires.

Medical exemption certificate

The NHS will cover the cost of your prescriptions if you have a qualifying medical condition and you have a medical exemption certificate. To find out if you're eligible, speak to your doctor. If yours is one of the medical conditions that entitles you to a certificate, your doctor will give you an FP92A application form. The form tells you what to do.

Your certificate will be valid for five years, starting from one month before the date that we receive your application. It will show the date that it expires.

NHS Tax Credit Exemption Certificate

If your annual family income (used to work out your tax credits) is £15,276 or less and you receive Child Tax Credit, Working Tax Credit including a disability element or Child Tax Credit and Working Tax Credit paid together, you will automatically be sent an NHS Tax Credit Exemption Certificate. It will be valid for up to seven months and it will show the date that it expires. However, your Tax Credit award notice also shows that you meet the qualifying conditions and can be used instead of a certificate. Your partner and any young people included in the award will be covered too.

HC2 certificate (NHS Low Income Scheme certificate for full help with health costs)

If you're on a low income, the NHS will cover the cost of your prescriptions if you have applied to the NHS Low Income Scheme and been issued with an HC2 certificate. Your partner and any dependent children under 19 included in your application will be covered too. You'll need to reapply when your certificate reaches its expiry date.

Please note that the cost of your prescriptions are not covered by the NHS if you have an HC3 certificate for partial help with health costs.

For more information on the NHS Low Income Scheme, see page 7.

War pension exemption certificate

If you have a war pension exemption certificate, the NHS will only cover the cost of prescriptions relating to your accepted disability. You'll need to pay for any other prescriptions you may need, unless you're exempt on other grounds.

Evidence of your entitlement

Your certificate is your evidence. It must be in date when your prescription is dispensed and you should always show your certificate to the practice or pharmacy staff when you collect your prescriptions.

Free of charge contraceptives

The NHS covers the cost of items prescribed for contraceptive purposes. However, you'll have to pay for other items on the same prescription unless you're exempt because of your age, benefits or certificate.

If you're still unsure

If you're not sure that you qualify for the NHS to cover the cost of your prescriptions or you're waiting to find out, you should pay for your prescription and ask for an NHS receipt (form FP57). If you then find that you do qualify and can provide evidence, you can claim a refund. The receipt tells you what to do.

Don't run the risk

You are responsible for your claim, even if someone else collects the prescription for you. If you claim free prescriptions that you're not entitled to, you could be facing a penalty charge of up to £100 as well as the prescription charge(s). Under the National Health Service (Penalty Charge) Regulations 1999, if you don't pay within the required timescale, an additional charge of up to £50 may apply.

How to get help with prescription costs

NHS Low Income Scheme

If you have a low income, you may be entitled to help with the cost of prescriptions and other NHS charges through the NHS Low Income Scheme. You can apply for the scheme as long as your savings, investments or property (not including the place where you live) don't exceed £16,000, or £23,250 if you permanently live in a care home. Any help you're entitled to is also available to your partner and any dependent young people.

You'll need to provide details of your current financial position. Visit www.nhsbsa.nhs.uk/healthcosts to find out how to apply.

If you need help making your claim or have questions about the NHS Low Income Scheme, visit www.nhsbsa.nhs.uk/AskUs.

Prescription prepayment certificates (PPCs)

If you need to pay for your prescriptions, you could save money by buying a PPC for either 3 months or 12 months. If you choose the 12 month option, you can spread the cost by paying in 10 monthly Direct Debit instalments. Visit www.nhsbsa.nhs.uk/ppc for current prices.

PPCs cover all NHS prescriptions dispensed while the certificate is valid. You can choose your PPC's start date, as long as the date you choose is no more than a month before or after the date that you apply.

To buy a PPC:

- visit www.nhsbsa.nhs.uk/ppc
- call 0300 330 1341
- ask your doctor or pharmacy for an FP95 application form.

You can also buy PPCs over the counter at some pharmacies (a list is available at www.nhsbsa.nhs.uk/ppc), although you won't be able to pay by Direct Debit. Ask your pharmacist for more information.
