The roadmap to your NHS Jobs service

Working with employers and other stakeholders, we developed a completely new service to manage your full recruitment life cycles, from job posting to onboarding successful applicants. The service has additional features and enhancements, based on feedback from those who use it, while keeping the core functionality of the old service.

We have built and are iterating NHS Jobs based on feedback, to ensure we're delivering a service that's fit for purpose, future proof and meets your needs. To improve the user experience for employers and applicants, NHS Jobs is designed using an agile project structure. This means that new features and improvements are planned and developed in a continuous three month cycle. This ensures we can react quickly to your feedback and develop features based on user needs and evolving technology.

The NHS Jobs roadmap conveys how the service is being developed on a quarterly basis. Showing employers that we are not only building an improved service, but reacting to their feedback and needs as we go.

Description	Benefit/Value
Employers will have the ability to end job listings early when they are no longer required. This could be because the employer takes their recruitment offline once they get to the shortlisting stage or the job listing is no longer active.
This functionality applies to listings that have reached the 'Shortlisting' stage onward.
For listings at a 'Shortlisting' stage, an email will automatically be sent to applicants who are still active in the recruitment for the job.
For listings after the 'Shortlisting' stage, the employer will be given the choice of whether to send an email or not, as they may have already contacted the applicants offline.	Employers can remove listings that are no dashboards so that they can focus on activ
